CLS NIGHT AT THE ROUGHRIDERS

On Friday, March 23rd, we will be hosting a CLS Night at the Cedar Rapids RoughRiders! Jubilation (students in grades 5-8) has been asked to sing the National Anthem. There are 58 students in Jubilation, but we can take a max of 45 students onto the ice to sing. If more than 45 students in Jubilation turn in their order forms, we will take the first 45.

When you turn in your order form, please write your child's name on the sheet to indicate that he or she is in Jubilation and will be singing. This will make it easier to count and keep track of how many singers we have.

Singers get into the game for free and CLS parents, friends, and families attending get in at a discounted price. Please see the flyer for more information.

Strong-willed Women Mothering Strong-willed Children

This article is taken from Focus on the Family. You can find it here: <http://bit.ly/2m8YrA6>

"My strong-willed child and I are like two goats fighting on a cliff — neither of us is backing down and we're both willing to go over the edge to get our way." This recent admission from a strong-willed mom undoubtedly has a lot of you nodding in agreement. If you're a strong-willed woman, it can be tough to parent a younger version of yourself. But you also have a definite advantage — you know what it's like to be a strong-willed child. From that angle, let me remind you of three important truths:

1. Often it's not what we say; it's how we say it. You're tired and frustrated and you command, "I said do it now!" No strong-willed child wants to be ordered around, but we all need to respect and obey authority. So think about how you'd want to be spoken to — and if necessary, ask for a do-over. Keep your voice calm, but firm.

2. We shouldn't accept bad behavior — from the child or the parent.

When I was a new parent, I would hear myself issuing an ultimatum, knowing full well that my strong-willed child would not respond positively. As my boys got a little older, I changed my approach. We made a deal that anytime I was talking to them and they felt I was being overly bossy or rude, they had my permission to raise their hand and interrupt me with the code word ouch. That would stop everything, and their response helped me realize that my tone or words were offensive. Then I'd back up, rephrase and continue. This approach tended to depersonalize the conflict and improve our relationship.

3. We need to model the right way to handle conflict.

Your strong-willed child is quickly figuring out how the world works — and a lot of those lessons have come from watching how you handle life's ups and downs. Because I was a strong-willed mom, I tended to defend my opinions with passion and unswerving conviction. It shouldn't have come as a surprise to me when my strong-willed son and I went toe-to-toe on almost everything, but it took me awhile to figure out he was mirroring my method of arguing.

It was when I began to consciously model how I wanted him to handle conflict that our relationship began to improve. For example, when we'd begin to disagree, I'd try to ask more questions and make fewer demands.

When both mother and child have an inborn drive to be in charge, it has the potential to create epic power struggles that end in a damaged relationship. But if Mom can think about what she was like as a child and how she'd want to be treated, then she can back off and see the situation from the perspective of her own strong-willed child.

Your life as the mother of a kid who's a lot like you may not be particularly easy, but you can use your own experience to strengthen the relationship with this young version of you. And then if you have an opportunity to complain to your parents, they will no doubt empathize — but there's a good chance they'll say that you were well worth all the trouble. ~Mrs. Perez

January Hymn: Once in Royal David's City

Singing: 6th Grade

Dear CLS Parents,

As part of our National Lutheran Schools Week Celebration, we will be taking the CLS student body bowling. This will take place on Friday, January 26. We will be eating an early lunch so we can leave school by 12:00. The students will bowl at Westdale Bowling Alley from about 12:30-2:00. We will leave Westdale by 2:15 to return to school. Students will need to wear tennis shoes that day, since we are not required to wear bowling shoes. There is no cost for this event, thank you to PTL for funding our trip! We will be taking buses, so no driver/chaperones are needed. Please return the permission slip at the bottom of this note with the YOUNGEST CHILD in your family.

Note: One permission slip is needed per family. (make sure all student's names are listed.)

Preschoolers will not be joining us on this event.

PLEASE RETURN TO SCHOOL BY MONDAY, JANUARY 22!!
